Precious Animal Jewellery

GITTA PIELCKE

Jewellery designers are constantly trying to incorporate new figures and designs from nature into their creations, and animals have been an inspiration for them since time immemorial. Today, animal jewellery represents a broad niche market incorporating original and sophisticated pieces. The most valuable pieces are made out of precious metals and decorated with precious and semi-precious stones.

Much of the available animal jewellery is in the form of charms and pendants. In certain cultures they are considered to be quite lucky and are worn as good luck charms. I don't know whether the high-end pieces displayed below will bring good fortune, but they will certainly bring you a great deal of joy and happiness, not to mention admiring glances...
